I can understand what plants need in order to grow.

Today, we planted our own broad beans. First we discussed what our plants needed in order to grow. We decided that they all need sunlight, water and soil. Some people suggested they might need air to grow but some of us were unsure. Next lesson, we are going to investigate whether or not they need air or not to survive. We drew these different things that plants needed, the equipment we needed and wrote our predictions in our bean diaries.

We then began to plant our beans. We chose to plant our bean in a see-through cup so we could see it grow. We then put lots of soil in it, put our bean in the side and then put our name tag in it so we knew which one was ours! Afterwards, everyone put their cups on the window sill so they could have sunlight.

When we had finished, we opened our bean diaries again and wrote how we planted them and what our favourite bit was.

Now we need to be patient and wait for our beans to germinate and make sure we are watering them when they need it!

Here are a few pictures of us planting our seeds:
